EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

In October 2018, the Junior and Emerging Miners' Desk of the Minerals Council South Africa ("MCSA") (Previously the Chamber of Mines), commissioned Mr. Hermanus Jacobus Kriel to conduct research into the Junior Mining Sector in South Africa. This research report will provide insight into the Junior Mining sector based on the outcomes in two parts:

- PART 1: A desktop study to estimate the size of the Junior Mining Sector in South Africa, as well as the potential economic impact of the sector.
- PART 2: A survey of the 25 Junior Mining members of the Junior and Emerging Miners' Desk of the Minerals Council of South Africa.

This report will show that there is no single definition of Junior Mining companies in South Africa. Various stakeholders use slightly different definitions which causes confusion in the market. Some definitions are outdated. This research shows that the definition proposed by the Minerals Council of South Africa (2018) is the most useful and should be adopted as the standard.

This research indicates that the Department of Mineral Resources of South Africa has issued around 1,490 mining licences to Junior Mining companies for a wide variety of commodities. In fact, around 80% of mining licences are allocated to Junior Mining companies and only 20% to Majors. The Juniors however only generate 8% of the total revenue generated by the South African mining industry.

The Junior Mining Sector in South Africa currently employs between 33,500 and 40,300 people directly and probably as many again through fixed term contracts. This is between 7,5% and 9% of permanent jobs in the broader South African mining industry that currently employs around 450,000 people.

The call by President Cyril Ramaphosa in January 2019 to create 275,000 jobs per year can be greatly bolstered by the Junior Mining Sector, which expressed in this survey that job creation was an important part of their purpose. Considering the multiplier effect of between 7- and 10-times for job creation in surrounding industries, the Junior Mining Sector currently creates between 230,000 jobs on the conservative estimate side and 800,000 jobs on the upper end of estimates for the South African economy.

Although the research does not have a definitive figure for the number of Junior Mining Companies in South Africa, this research makes the following estimation:

- Junior Miners (with multiple licences and established corporate structures) hold an estimated 685 mining licences in 414 companies/entities
- Small-Scale Miners (with single licences that are operational) hold an estimated 467 mining licences in 463 companies/entities
- Micro Miners (with single licences in operational start-up) hold an estimated 341 mining licences in 341 companies/entities

The Junior Miner sector includes Micro-, Small-Scale- and Junior Miners. The economic impact that these companies have within the mining sector according to STATS SA is as follows:

Capital Expenditure per annum: R2.751 billion (4.1% of total mining industry)

Revenue per annum: R54.93 billion (7.8% of total mining industry)

Expenditure per annum: R55.86 billion (8.4% of total mining industry)

Junior Miners spent R2.75 billion on capital goods in 2018, which is 4% of the capital spend in the mining industry. Juniors contribute 3% - 5% of total taxes paid in the Mining Industry.

The survey of Junior Mining companies affiliated to MCSA provided the following key responses:

Junior Miners see their greatest purpose as:

- Job Creation
- Wealth Creation for entrepreneurs who take risks
- To spearhead the introduction of new technology in mining
- To utilise mineral resources that are too small for major mining houses' overhead structures

53% of Juniors aspire to operate at least one mine.

68% of Juniors responded by saying they are focussed on supplying their products back into the South African economy.

With regards to commodity attractiveness; respondents indicated that Coal, Precious Metals and Industrial Minerals are most attractive for success as Junior Miners.

The survey highlighted the following factors as impediments to Junior Miners developing their projects successfully:

- 64% of respondents cited the regulatory environment in South Africa as not being conducive for success
- 23% of respondents cited a lack of funding as a major impediment.

Junior Miners indicated that obtaining a mining licence was the single biggest obstacle to progress. It is also the most time-consuming aspect. It is unclear if the delay is caused by Junior Miners' inability to comply with DMR requirements or if the delays are due to inefficiencies at the DMR.

Junior Miners responded that they prefer non-interfering business partners. 71% of respondents want funding partners who exit after a fixed period. 59% of respondents indicated that they do not want to sell an equity stake in their project as a funding option.

From the 17 participants in the survey, 47% were small companies with revenues below R5 million per annum, and salary bills below R1 million per annum.

PART 1: DESKTOP STUDY OF EXISTING INFORMATION ON THE SOUTH AFRICAN JUNIOR MINING SECTOR

1. INTRODUCTION

In October 2018, the Junior and Emerging Miners' Desk of the Minerals Council South Africa ("MCSA") (Previously the Chamber of Mines), commissioned Mr. Hermanus Jacobus Kriel to conduct research into the Junior Mining Sector in South Africa. Mr. Kriel has 30 years mining experience and is a PhD student at the University of Pretoria and was introduced to the Minerals Council by his study supervisor, Professor Con Fauconnier. Mr. Kriel is currently busy with independent research into other aspects of the Junior Mining Sector.

1.1 Background

The Junior and Emerging Miners' Desk of the Minerals Council South Africa, and previously the Chamber of Mines, conducted and contributed to various studies into the Junior Mining Sector of South Africa during the past 20 years.^{1, 2, 3, 4} This 2019 research has considered all previous work conducted by the Minerals Council and has a primary goal of documenting the current state of the Junior Mining Sector based on available information in the public domain. This research is a desktop survey and is by no means comprehensive or exhaustive but must form a strong "state of the South African junior mining sector" foundation, which may be useful for further in-depth research.

This report accepts that South Africa has a long, successful history in mining with a wealth of mineral resources and ore reserves that should serve the nation well into the future. It will therefore not ponder on the history of mining in South Africa. It will however attempt to segregate the data relevant to junior mining from that of the major mining houses, as well as small-scale and artisanal miners.

This assignment was commissioned by the Minerals Council South Africa. The researcher, Mr. Kriel acts independently of the Minerals Council South Africa and holds no direct interest in the Minerals Council.

1.2 Scope of this report

The purpose of this report is to document and quantify the findings of a desktop survey to establish:

- The number of junior, emerging and exploration companies operating in South Africa
- The economic impact of these Junior companies on the overall mining sector
- The number of people that this sector employs
- The economic impact that this sector has on the broader economy in various areas including procurement
- The potential of growth

The second phase of the study will report on findings of a survey into a sample of 25 junior mining companies currently affiliated to the Junior and Emerging Miners' Desk at the Minerals Council, South Africa.

The study commenced in November 2018 and had a seven-month duration, with final delivery in June 2019.

1.3 Definition of Emerging and Junior Mining Companies

For this report to form the foundation of future research, it is imperative to settle on a definition for the Emerging and Junior Mining Sector. There are numerous definitions of this sector in South Africa and internationally.

1.3.1 Definition Source 1, Department of Mineral Resources

The Department of Mineral Resources (“DMR”) is the custodian of mining data collection and statistical reporting in South Africa. A meeting was held with the Deputy Director, Mineral Economics, Me. Mpuleng Galane in November 2018 to understand the department’s point of view. Although the department does not officially split the mining sector into sub-sectors, Me. Galane did indicate that it is in the process of pursuing a Memorandum of Understanding with the Minerals Council in order to differentiate the junior and small miner mining sub-sectors from the major mining companies. To this end the DMR has shared the following table:

Table 1 DMR Definition used by Small Scale Mining Directorate

Category	Micro (class1)	Very Small (Class 2)	Small (Class3)	Medium (Junior Class 4)
No. of employees	<5	<20	<50	<200
Assets (property excluded)	<R100 000	<R1.8million	<R4,5 million	<R18 million
Annual revenue	<R150 000	<R3 million	<R7,5 million	<R30 million

Source: South African Small Business Act 1996

McGill and Theart, (2006) also referenced this table in their report¹¹ in the Journal of the South African Institute of Mining and Metallurgy as the definition employed by the then Department of Minerals and Energy (“DME”).

1.3.2 Definition Source 2, Minerals and Energy Policy Centre

In 2002 the Minerals and Energy Policy Centre (“MEPC”) published a research report¹ for the South African Mining Development Association (“SAMDA”), with the following definition:

Table 2 MEPC definition for various Mining Categories - 2002

Category	Activity	Operation	Gross Asset Value	Annual sales value per annum
Majors	Production, Exploration	Global Markets	>R1 billion	>R1 billion
Juniors	Contractors, Production and Exploration Companies	South African Based	>R18 million but <R1 billion	From R30 million to R1 billion
Small Scale (Formal)	Producers	Regionally Based	Up to R18 million	Up to 30 million
Small Scale (Informal)	Producers	Locally Based	Up to R150,000	Up to R500,000

1.3.3 Definition Source 3, MINTEK

MINTEK made a presentation⁴ at the Fossil Fuel Foundation conference on Junior Mining in South Africa on 27 June 2014 in which they used definitions from various sources.

1. Dr. MWF Seeger used the following categorisation in his 2007 PhD thesis titled: “Development of strategic and tactical game plan for junior mining companies”:
 - a. Major or Large Scale
 - b. Junior, Mid-Tier
 - c. Small-Scale
 - d. Artisanal

He describes a Junior Mining Company as “small, entrepreneurial mining company that is focussed on the identification of exploration targets, undertakes exploration, develops feasibility studies and in some cases develops mines in-house.”

2. The Casey’s International Spectator Report (2013) defines a Junior Mining Company as a “small-cap, high-profit company sitting on discoveries that could significantly increase its profits and of course the value of its stock.”
3. Landu L, a sustainability development researcher at the Mineral Economic and Strategy Unit at MINTEK elaborated further by adding the following to the definition:
 - a. Large Scale Mining:
 - i. Covers bigger sizes/concession areas – double that of Junior Miners
 - ii. Spans approximately 5,000 hectares in South Africa
 - iii. Comprises 85% of global production
 - iv. Has 2.5 million employees
 - v. Generates revenue of approximately $4.3 billion in 2012
 - vi. Employs heavy equipment, high-tech, capable of large output
 - b. Junior Mining:
 - i. Has a much smaller concession area
 - ii. Spans approximately 1,000 hectares in South Africa
 - iii. Focuses on exploration, and earns little or no revenue from production
 - iv. Is active in high-risk zones with high investment risk of exploration
 - v. Is critical in the initial stages of the mining value chain

- c. Small Scale Mining:
 - i. Comprises 15% of global production
 - ii. Has turnover of less than R7.5 million per operation
 - iii. Employs less than 50 people
 - iv. Employs mostly manual labour using ordinary instruments to mine, which is labour intensive
 - v. Operates on a survival level
4. The MINTEK presentation also references the definition from the SOUTH AFRICAN SMALL BUSINESS ACT 1996, as shown in Table 1.

1.3.4 Definition Source 4, International Institute for Environment and Development

The International Institute for Environment and Development in a report titled: “Global Report on Artisanal & Small-Scale Mining, (2002)¹⁰”, cite the following criteria for classification of a miner into Major, Junior, Small Scale or Artisanal:

- Production Volume
- Number of persons per productive unit
- Intensity (volume) of capital employed
- Labour productivity
- Size of mine claims
- Quantity of reserves
- Sales volume
- Operational continuity
- Operational reliability
- Duration of mining cycle

The report stated that “many attempts have been made to define Artisanal and Small-Scale Mining finally and a common definition of the term has not been found.” “The local definitions vary from country to country according to the macroeconomic situation, the geological framework, the mining history and the legal conditions.”

The report estimated the number of people employed by the artisanal and small-scale miner (“ASM”) sector in the 18 countries that were studied. This represents more than half of the worldwide ASM population.

Table 3 People employed in the ASM sector across 18 countries in 2002

Country	Total Number of workers
Bolivia	72,000
Brazil	10,000
Burkina Faso	100,000 to 200,000
China	3,000,000 to 15,000,000
Ecuador	92,000
Ghana	200,000
India	500,000
Indonesia	109,000
Malawi	40,000
Mali	200,000
Mozambique	60,000
Peru	30,000
Philippines	185,400

1.3.5 Definition Source 5, An Australian Perspective

The Australian Junior Mining sector can be described as mature and well represented. It may therefore serve as a useful example for South Africa to follow. In their Journal publication¹², Iddon C, Hettihewa S and Wright S, provide an Australian definition of Junior Mining firms. They assert that, “The majority of Junior Mining Firms are pre-production firms with no earnings and negative cash-flow.” In their study they exclude firms with operating mines, and they state the reason as, “The objectives of Junior Mining Firms are limited to:

- Exploring for commercially viable mineral deposits.
- Investigating and delineating previously identified ore bodies in the hope of advancing them to mineable status (Hogan et a. 2002), and/or
- Generating sufficient capital inflows to sustain operations.”

They state that between 60-70% of junior mining listings in Australia are “truly valueless.”

During various visits to Australia and the “Mining Down Under” conference, the author (Mr Kriel) concurs with this view. There is a vibrant junior mining economy run by well-spoken CEOs who generate sufficient capital inflows to keep their junior mining companies afloat by “selling” their projects to investors, while prospecting for the right mineral resources. Numerous junior mining companies listed on the Australian Stock Exchange (“ASX”) have a Market Capitalisation below AUS$5 million. Of 160 mining companies listed in the Mineral Sands-, HPA-, Phosphate-, Vanadium-, Tin- and Uranium Sector, of the ASX on 1 January 2019; 60 companies (37.7% of 160 listed) have a market capitalisation below AUS$10 million, 32 companies (20%) list below AUS$5 million. Only 20 companies (12.5%) are valued over AUS$100.

A comprehensive summary of the ASX Mining Sector Capitalisations on 8 November 2011 after the global financial crises is shown in the following table.

Table 4 ASX Mining Company Market Capitalisation - November 2011

Market Capitalisation AUS$	Number of mining companies	%

In 2018, the Minerals Council of South Africa engaged stakeholders on the Mining Charter 3. Table 6 summarises definitions proposed for Junior and Emerging Miners. The author of this research report (Mr Kriel) supports these definitions of the sector because they are comprehensive.

1.4 Investor Risk model consideration for the Junior Mining Sector

The mining business life cycle can be described as all activities or steps necessary in developing mining projects from initial discovery of a mineral deposit to the point of legal mine closure. This cycle remains consistent irrespective of the size of the mine. International investors have developed numerous models for evaluating investment opportunity on a risk reward basis. Figure 1 is a simplified but generally accepted summary of the mining business life cycle.

Once again, the model illustrates Junior Mining activity occurring during the early stages of project development i.e. exploration and pre-development. The model identifies mine construction and mine production as a senior mining activity. This international investor perspective model confines Junior Mining to pre-production activities. Pre-production activities are not associated with revenue and profits. Because this model is entrenched in many minds internationally, the South African definition of Junior Miners, where revenues of between R50 million and R500 million can be expected, may be missed completely. The global investor model also clearly highlights the higher risk associated with early stage mine discovery, exploration and feasibility. Only once a project reaches the bankable feasibility stage, is risk sufficiently mitigated. According to this model, this forms the beginning of 'senior' mining.

We know that a small number of junior mining companies move beyond the bankable feasibility stage with success. What the author of this report would like to highlight is that investors may have labelled all junior mining companies as high-risk investments, and therefore these companies do not attract the right amount of investment in South Africa.

1.5 The Mining Value Chain and the role of the Junior Miner

The mining value chain is summarized in Figure 2 and shows the key areas and decision points along the mining project development and execution process. Many other models exist, but this high-level view is enough to illustrate where Junior Mining Activity is prevalent.

From our previous discussions, Junior Miner activity is skewed towards the left half of the mining value chain, predominantly concerned with:

- Discovery
- Exploration and Feasibility
- Construction (to a lesser extent)
- Mining and Extraction (to a lesser extent)

Some Junior Miners do operate across the entire mining value chain and therefore meet the South African definition of Junior Miners, which includes operational mines generating up to R500 million in revenue per annum. Considering companies listed on the JSE, TSX and AST, it can be deduced that the number of companies that transition from a Junior Exploration Company to a Junior Mining Company and ultimately becoming a major mining company, is very small.

Many Junior Mining Companies have clear strategies to never go into construction and actual mining. Their goal is to develop a mineral deposit to bankable feasibility level and sell it off to a major. This model is often associated with Juniors listed on stock exchanges in Canada and Australia. In South Africa, the research shows a significant difference: Junior Mining Companies are mainly smaller producers.

1.6 Discussion of the Definition of Junior Miners

Various definitions of Junior Miners exist internationally and in South Africa. Over decades no uniform definition has been accepted. This survey will not add another attempt at a definition but will accept the definition as proposed by the Minerals Council South Africa, as it allows for updating values of previous definitions (from 1996 and 2002). In South Africa, the Department of Mineral Resources provides aggregated data for public consumption. This data does not differentiate between the various sizes of mining companies. The definition as used by the DMR based on the South African Small Business Act, 1996, appears not entirely appropriate for the mining industry which has larger numbers at play than the small businesses the Act was intended for. Based on interviews at the DMR Mineral Economics Directorate, it is evident that all statistics provided to STATS SA, is based on the South African Small Business Act, 1996 and as a result this understates the size and the contribution of the Junior Mining Sector as compared to the definitions proposed by the Junior and Emerging Miners' Desk at the Minerals Council (2018), or the definitions proposed by MEPC report for SAMDA(2002). The following table provides a direct comparison between the various definitions for Juniors (excluding Majors and Small-Scale Miners).

Table 7 Comparison of key South African Definitions of Junior Miners

Source of Definition	Date	Employees	Gross Asset Value	Annual sales value per annum
South African Small Business Act (1996)	1996 (2018)	<200	<R18 million (<R60 million)	<R30 million (<R100 million)
MEPC report for SAMDA (2002)	2002	<1000	>R18 million but <R1 billion	From R30 million to R1 billion
MCSA (2018)	2018	<500		From R50 million to R500 million

The 1996 Annual Sales figures as defined in the South African Small Business Act, 1996, when inflated by CPI to 2018 are more comparable to Minerals Council 2018 defined figures. The gross asset value number from the South African Small Business Act is however slightly lower; even after inflating it to 2018 money, compared to market capital of say Australian Listed Junior Mining Companies which typically range between R50 million and R100 million. The Minerals Council definition does not state values for gross asset value, which should be considered, as it is often a key consideration in markets such as Australia and Canada. The research shows that there may be a nuanced difference between how international investors, the Canadian stock market and the Australian stock market see the focus of Junior Mining Companies. They all have a greater focus on exploration and pre-operational development, and less on operating mines. The Minerals Council definition however states a R500 million per annum revenue objective, which is associated with operational mines.

2. THE NUMBER OF JUNIOR MINING AND EXPLORATION COMPANIES OPERATING IN SOUTH AFRICA

The Department of Mineral Resources in South Africa is the custodian of Prospecting and Mining Rights and therefore a key stakeholder in determining the number of Junior, Emerging and Exploration companies in South Africa. The DMR is central to key statistical data¹⁵ that is gathered in the mining sector. In the latest update of the database in 2018, the department lists 1856 unique mine codes. These are 5-digit numbered codes allocated to each mining licence holder. The database provides high-level information:

- Mine Code
- Mine Name
- Mine Owner
- Postal Address
- Telephone Number
- Magisterial District and Province
- Operational Status and Type of Mine
- Commodity
- Farm Name

The author interviewed the DMR team responsible for managing this database in November 2018. Apart from the information divulged in the database, they are by law¹⁶ not allowed to share any more detailed data with the public. Further engagement with the Director General would be required, but unfortunately was not possible within the timelines of this survey.

The 2018 data shows the following breakdown of operational status:

- 10 Licences for Agents
- 36 Licences for Mine at Sea
- 1 Licence for Mine at Sea, Opencast and Surface to the State Diamond Mining Company
- 1504 Licences for Opencast Mining
- 28 Licences for Opencast Mining and Surface Operations
- 2 Licences for Opencast, Surface and Underground Operations
- 33 Licences for Opencast and Underground Operations
- 4 Licences for Mine Operating
- 30 Licences for Surface Operations
- 7 Licences for Underground Mining with Surface Operations
- 135 Licences for Underground Mining
- 6 Licences for Prospecting Opencast
- 34 Licences for Works Surface
- 1 Licence for Works OMS Opencast

- 24 Licences for Works OMS Surface
- 1 Licence for Works OMS Underground

It can be deduced that 177 (9.6%) licences are for underground mining operations, 60 (3.2%) for works, 6 (0.3%) for prospecting on operating mines, 37 (2.0%) for mining at sea, 10(0.5%) for agents, while the vast majority, 1566(84.3%) of operating mines are surface and open cast in nature.

Mr. Alex Khumalo of the Minerals Council also utilised the DMR data for purposes of establishing a Dashboard³ for Emerging Miners in South Africa. His analysis identified the following:

Table 8 Minerals Council Dashboard for Junior Miners - Coal, Diamonds, Gold and PGM's

Province	Licences operated by Junior Miners	Licences operated by Mid-Tier	Licences operated by Majors
Eastern Cape	1 coal
Free State	18 diamond, 1 gold		1 coal, 1 diamond, 3 gold

The above analysis was limited to coal, diamonds, gold and PGMs. Further desktop analysis of the DMR 2018 database provides the following additional breakdown per commodity class:

The information in the previous tables illustrates the number of operations in South Africa with mining licences. It however does not account for companies holding multiple licences and therefore does not give an accurate view of the number of mining companies. From the DMR database, it can be deduced that various companies with different names operate under one holding company. For the purposes of this desktop survey the following table is a first attempt to provide a quantum of the number of companies as presented in the 2018 DMR data.

Table 10 Licences held per a Group/Company/Trust/CC or Individual

The DMR data does not provide any of the key information such as turnover or number of employees required to distinguish between major miners, micro, small scale- or Junior Miners as per our definitions. The author therefore applied some subjective criteria to the data in order to estimate the quantum of each grouping. The following subjective criteria were applied to classify each entity on the DMR database as 1. Major-, 2. Junior-, 3. Small-Scale- or 4 Micro Miner:

- Companies listed on the JSE were generally considered as Majors except for a small number of listed companies with turnovers below R500 million, in which case they were classified as Juniors
- Companies not listed on the JSE but known to have large operations with employees exceeding 500 were also classified as Majors.
- All companies not classified as Majors holding more than one mining licence were classified as Junior
- Companies known to the author, which fall into the definition of medium scale miner (refer to table 5), were classified as Junior.
- All remaining companies were subjectively classified as either Small-scale Miner or Micro Miner. In cases where DMR used the words “Quarry, Colliery, Exploration” in the mine name or if the owner showed some more formality in Ownership such as Company, CC, Trust the author categorized these entities as Small-Scale Miners.
- All remaining entities were classified as Micro Miners. These entities typically make use of persons’ names as owner of the mining licence.

This approach may be flawed and inaccurate. This research has found that the 1856 licences are divided as follows:

Table 11 Evaluation of DMR data for Mining Licence allocation by Operation Size using subjective selection criteria

	Micro Miners	Small-Scale Miners	Junior Miners	Major Mining Companies
No. of Licences	341 (18.4%)	467 (25.2%)	685 (36.9%)	361 (19.5%)

Source: DMR 2018 Dataset¹⁵, Manipulated by author. See Annexure A

It is suggested that the largest proportion of mining licences are allocated to companies that are either classified as Small-Scale- or Junior Miners, totalling more than 62%.

2.1 Discussion of the number of Junior Miners in South Africa

Comparing the Minerals Council Dashboard and the author’s analysis of DMR 2018 data, there are some minor, subjective differences in approach.

Table 12 Correlation of two independent reviews of Mining Licence Data

	Minerals Council Dashboard (Number of licences)	Independent analysis of 2018 DMR dataset (Number of licences)
Majors	346 (19.6%)	361 (19.5%)
Junior Miners	1419 (80.4%)	1493 (80.5%)
Total	1765	1854

The outcomes of the two independent exercises are closely correlated and thus can be used as baseline information until a more comprehensive evaluation is carried out.

The analysis showed that, excluding prospecting licences and permits, the current split of mining operations in South Africa as follows:

- Major Mining Companies hold an estimated 361 mining licences in 88 companies
- Junior Miners hold an estimated 685 mining licences in 414 companies/entities
- Small-Scale Miners hold an estimated 467 mining licences in 463 companies/entities
- Micro Miners hold an estimated 341 mining licences in in 341 companies/entities

3. THE ECONOMIC IMPACT OF JUNIOR COMPANIES ON THE OVERALL MINING SECTOR

3.1 Statistics from the South African Revenue Service

The previous section showed a total of 1218 emerging miners (414 Junior-, 463 Small-Scale- and 341 Micro miners). The South African Revenue Service recently published statistics for the 2017 Financial Year which ended on 28 February 2017. Although SARS figures cannot be directly correlated with the DMR 2018 statistics, it will provide insight into the contribution made by the Junior mining sector.

The following table shows the total contribution to the fiscus by the mining sector, including all categories (Majors, Juniors, Small-Scale and Micro)

Table 13 SARS statistics for the Mining and Quarrying Sector (all companies)

	Number of Taxpayers	Taxable Income (ZAR million)	Tax Assessed (ZAR million)
FY2014	2633	-13 331	13 821

FY2016	2970 (8.5% more than previous year)	-41 791	14 526
FY2017	1543 (48% less than previous year)	-195	2 294

Source: SARS Statistics 2018¹⁷(p175)

The information in the table above shows the averages for all companies associated with mining and quarrying in South Africa. The combined sector was loss making for the four years shown in the table. It is significant to note the 48% reduction of mining and quarrying companies between FY2016 and FY2017. This has had a massive negative impact on the tax contribution from the mining industry, with tax contribution falling from R14.5 billion in FY2016 to R2.3 billion in FY2017, a percentage drop of 84%. In order to show the economic impact of companies that reported profits, the following table is limited to companies reporting positive taxable income.

Table 14 SARS statistics for the Mining and Quarrying Sector (Profitable companies)

	Number of Taxpayers	Taxable Income (ZAR million)	Tax Assessed (ZAR million)
FY2014	803 (30% of all companies)	51 064	13 821

FY2017	599 (39% of all companies)	8 213	2 294

Source: SARS Statistics 2018¹⁷(p178)

Only 30% of mining and quarrying companies reported positive taxable income in FY2014 and FY2015. In FY2016 this figure increased to 32% and then rose significantly to 39% in FY2017.

SARS also reports the number of taxpayers (companies) per taxable income group per annum.

In South Africa, companies are taxed at a corporate tax rate of 28% of gross profit. The SARS information above shows a marked reduction in tax from the taxable income group above R25 million profit. This group consist of mostly Major Mining Houses; probably more than 90% of the profitable Majors. It is not clear what percentage of tax is contributed by Junior Miners. Juniors contribute a small proportion of the total tax, a guesstimate of between 3% and 5%. Therefore, 20% of mining licence holders (majors) contributes an estimated 95% to 97% of tax. These numbers will however have to be verified once more detailed data becomes available.

3.2 Analysis of Mining Companies Listed on the Johannesburg Stock Exchange

Since useful data to identify the Junior Mining sector is not available freely from the DMR, another avenue was explored.

With listed companies, information required by stock exchanges provides reliable information via independently audited annual financial statements. Whilst there are only a handful of Juniors listed on the JSE, this does provide an indicator on activity in the sector.

The analysis once again uses the definitions as stated in Table 6. The following table provides a summary of Mining Companies listed on the JSE.

Utilizing the Minerals Council definitions of Emerging and Junior Miners, as many as 15 companies with fewer than 500 employees can be identified. Utilizing market capitalisation of less than R500 million, we identify 18 companies that may fall into the Junior Miner Category. The author analysed annual financial statements of all these companies as reported at their Annual General Meeting, to see what economic impact these companies had, and to identify potential trends. These companies do not all report in ZAR and therefore the author applied the following exchange rates in order to make ZAR-based comparisons.

- ZAR14.00/US$
- ZAR17.8/BPS
- ZAR10.5/Ca$

The company results that were considered for this analysis are highlighted in green. The companies are diverse and require in-depth analysis which was not possible in the allowed timeframe of this desktop survey. The following can however be deduced from the information as presented in the previous two tables.

Table 19 Financial Performance of Junior Miners on the JSE

Number of employees	Revenue band (ZAR million)	Cost of Sales (ZAR million)	Net Profit/Loss after tax (ZAR million)

Source: Annual Financial Statements from Company websites. Accessed January 2019

Junior Miners experienced a very tough year with the majority of companies in a loss-making position. Only 4 of the 17 selected companies showed a profit.

The companies generated between R1million and R3.5billion in revenue. Average revenue for the 17 companies was R463million, but by removing Wescoal (skews the average), the average is R271million.

The companies incurred costs to run their businesses of between R1 million and R2.9 billion. Average cost of sales for the 17 companies was R362million, but by removing Wescoal (skews the average), the average is R189million.

This shows that the average Junior Miner showed operational profit of $R271m - R189m = R82m$, however other costs such as loan repayments and once off impairments saw these companies making losses. Should these companies however achieve an average profit of around R82m, it will result in R22.96m in corporate tax per successful Junior Miner.

3.3 STATS SA data on the Economic Impact of the Mining Industry in South Africa.

Statistics SA works in close cooperation with other State Departments to generate various sets of statistical information. The author verified with the DMR Minerals Economics team what the process entails. They confirmed that the DMR provides STATS SA with all relevant data in order to report the annual Financial Statistics of all Industries.

Tables 20 and 21 provides the Revenue and Expenditure statistics for 2018 for the mining sector split into three categories; Small- Medium- and Large Mining Companies.

3.3.1 Revenue

The “Medium” segment as defined by STATS SA generated a combined revenue of R16.2735 billion in the 6-month period Jan’18-Jun’18. In doubling this number, the full year forecast for revenue is R32.547 billion.

The “Small” segment as defined by STATS SA generated a combined revenue of R9.717 billion in the 6-month period Jan’18-Jun’18. In doubling this number, the full year forecast for revenue is R19.434 billion.

The combined “Medium and Small” mining sectors have a combined projected annual revenue of R51.981 billion. This is 7.6% of the whole mining sector’s projected total revenue, which is calculated as R686.184 billion.

Looking at the 12-month period July 2017 – June 2018 the STATS SA figures are as follows:

- Revenue for “Small” Category = R19.950 billion
- Revenue for “Medium” Category = R34.980 billion
- Revenue for “Large” Category = R647,140 billion
- Total Revenue for the Mining Industry = R702.070 billion

The combined revenue contribution of the “Small and Medium” Categories is R54.93 billion, which is 7.8% of the total Mining Industry revenue.

3.3.2 Operational Expenditure

Tables 20 and 21 similarly shows projected expenditures for the full 2018 to be:

- “Small” Category projected expenditure = R19.050 billion
- “Medium” Category projected expenditure = R31.588 billion
- “Large” Category projected expenditure = R 602.028 billion
- Total projected expenditure = R652.666 billion

Looking at the 12month period July 2017 – June 2018 the STATS SA figures are as follows:

- “Small” Category projected expenditure = R20.063 billion
- “Medium” Category projected expenditure = R35.798 billion
- “Large” Category projected expenditure = R 608.236 billion
- Total expenditure for the Mining Industry = R664.097 billion

The combined expenditure contribution of the “Small and Medium” Categories is R55.861 billion, which is 8.4% of the total Mining Industry expenditure.

3.3.3 Capital Expenditure

For the 12-month period July '17 - June '18 the capital expenditure was as follows:

Table 22 Capital Expenditure Jul'17 - Jun'18 for the Mining Industry

4. EMPLOYMENT POTENTIAL OF THE JUNIOR MINING SECTOR

4.1 The Department of Mineral Resources Employment Data

The DMR maintains statistics for the mining industry and reported¹⁸ in their last updated statistics the employment numbers for industry for the period 1995 – 2016. Statistics for 2017 and 2018 are not available yet, but considering the contractions reported by SARS¹⁷, it is expected that employment numbers have fallen substantially in the past two years. Job creation remains one of the elusive challenges that government faces. President Cyril Ramaphosa on Sunday 13 January 2019 again highlighted this in a statement¹⁹ where he says the ruling ANC will seek ways to stimulate industries that can create large numbers of jobs. Mining as a primary industry, has in the past fulfilled a significant role as job creator on a large scale. If the Junior Mining Sector can receive some stimulus and attract investment as it does in Canada and Australia, it may play a significant role in addressing the President’s call for 275,000 additional jobs per year for the next five years.

The following figure illustrates the data in Table 23. It shows a sharp increase in earnings, while the total number of jobs in the mining industry is trending lower since 2012. More than 67,000 predominantly male jobs were shed in this period, around 12.8% of the 2012 figure. This implies that 12.8% of breadwinners previously employed in mining, no longer receive an income from mining. This has serious socio-economic consequences.

The DMR data does not provide any detail with regards to the specific role that Junior Miners play regarding job creation in the total industry.

4.2 Employment by Junior Miners listed on the Johannesburg Stock Exchange

The JSE figures for the selected 17 Junior Mining Companies showed that the companies' employment rates are in line with the definitions used by the Minerals Council for the sector, with reported⁷ employees ranging between 4 and 556. From the listed Junior Mining companies, it can be established that there is a real opportunity to create between 5 and 500 new jobs just within the mining industry for each successful venture. The question therefore is not if the sector can create jobs, it is rather what can be done to ensure success for a new Junior Miner.

The average number of permanent employees for these 17 companies is 312.

The table above shows that Junior Miners are particularly susceptible to a negative economic climate, with 7 of the selected 17 shares suspended in the past 3 years. This may place the jobs in those companies at risk.

4.3 The Mining Qualifications Authority Employment Data

Apart from the DMR, the Mining Qualifications Authority (“MQA”), sources labour data from the Department of Higher Education and Training. Although this data is also not broken down into employment per mining company size, it does reveal the number of companies per size.

The MQA states that the “Small” subsector is defined by employers with less than 50 employees and “Large” companies employ more than 5000 employees. By implication, this means that “Medium” companies employ between 50 and 5000 employees. This does not align with definitions employed by the DMR or the Minerals Council. If, however we multiply the number of “Small” companies, that employ up to 50 people, by say an average of 25 employees, utilizing the MQA data shows that the Micro Mining Sector as defined for this report, potentially employs 33,550 people (1342 companies x 25). The MQA labour data differs slightly from the DMR data as they include “services incidental to mining”. The following table provides a total labour breakdown by occupational level.

The difference between DMR data and MQA data shows that for the period 2012 -2016 between 45 039 and 103 877 extra jobs incidental to mining were created within the mining industry. This however does not account for jobs created outside the mining industry.

5. THE ECONOMIC IMPACT THAT THE JUNIOR MINING SECTOR HAS ON THE BROADER ECONOMY

5.1 Economic Impact on Job Creation

A 2014 Australian study²⁰ on job multipliers of mining states that mining holds economic linkages in local economies that can be categorized into four types: backward, forward, revenue and demand linkages. The two former categories relate to all the demand for inputs and outputs that the mining industry generates that might promote economic activity in a region. The magnitude of the backward and forward linkages depends on the capacity of the local economy to supply the inputs required by the mining industry and/or to use the outputs of the industry. The revenue linkage refers to the potential enlargement of public revenues sourced by property and other types of taxes that mining companies must pay directly to government. The more tax mining companies contribute to the receiver of revenue, the higher the income of government and therefore potential public expenditure in critical areas such as roads, infrastructure, schools, hospitals etc. However, as seen in Table 16, taxes paid to SARS by mining companies has dropped significantly from R14.5 billion in FY2016 to R2.3 billion in FY2017 which represents an 84% loss to the state. Finally, demand linkage refers to all the economic effects that new labour employed in mining may produce in local economies. In South Africa, we saw mining shed more than 67,000 jobs between 2012 and 2016 with further net losses in 2017 and 2018. This places the demand linkage under pressure with a negative economic impact. In 1987 the South African mining industry employed around 760,000 people; today only 450,000 which equates to significant negative economic contribution from the mining industry.

In their 2014 research in Australia, Fleming and Measham (2014)²⁰ found that the local multipliers of mining are important for some local service sectors such as transport and rental and accommodation services, while local job spill over into tradable goods (manufacturing and agriculture) is statistically not significant. The following table illustrates the mining and local job multipliers across economic sectors.

The interpretation of the results in table 22, considering only the statistically significant numbers, shows that for each additional job created in mining; 7 jobs are created on a national level or 1.4 jobs in the specific mining region. These additional jobs will most probably be created in the following economic sectors:

- Wholesale trade
- Accommodation and food services
- Transport, postal and warehousing
- Financial and insurance services
- Rental, hiring and real estate services
- Other services

5.2 Economic Impact of Junior Miners as reported by STATS SA

STATS SA produces quarterly industry financial statistics. In the case of the mining industry, STATS SA obtains the relevant statistics from the Mineral Economics Department of the DMR. The following table provides the annual data for the mining industry in three size-categories for the period July 2017 to June 2018. Of interest for this research are the figures for “Small” and “Medium” mining categories which represent the Junior Miner spectrum.

The Junior Miner economic impact for the period is summarized as follows:

Revenue per annum R 54.4 billion

- Turnover R 48.7 billion
- Interest R 0.5 billion
- Dividends R 1.6 billion
- Rental/lease R 0.1 billion
- Plant/lease R 1.2 billion
- Profit on assets R 0.8 billion
- Other income R 1.6 billion

Expenses per annum R 55,5 billion

- Procurement R 21.1 billion
- Employees R 10.6 billion
- Interest paid R 1.1 billion
- Royalties and patents R 1.0 billion
- Hiring equipment R 1.1 billion
- Depreciation R 2.9 billion
- Loss on assets R 5.4 billion
- Other expenses R 11.3 billion

Considering the DMR statistics on salaries for 2016 from the B1 stats tables¹⁸, there were 457,668 people employed in mining and the total earnings were R120,450,115,000 which gives average annual earnings per employee of R263,182 (R21,931 per month). If this average applies for the Junior Mining Sector, the R10.6 billion paid to employees equates to 40,276 employees.

From these figures, the Junior Miners were in a net loss-making position and therefore did not contribute positively in terms of corporate tax. However, the 40,276 employees all contributed to the South African economy through personal tax.

PART 2: SURVEY OF EXISTING CLIENTS TO THE EMERGING MINERS DESK AT THE MINERALS COUNCIL OF SOUTH AFRICA

6. SURVEY DESIGN AND METHODS

An online survey was conducted during April and May 2019. The survey was open to a control group consisting of 25 member companies affiliated with the Junior and Emerging Miners Desk of the Minerals Council of South Africa. It was decided to limit the survey to this control group, as these companies already have a relationship with the Minerals Council and a vested interest in supporting the initiatives from the Minerals Council.

The survey was developed on the Microsoft Forms platform that allows for automatic statistical analysis. The survey was communicated to the participants via e-mail from Mr. Grant Mitchell, head: Junior and Emerging Miners Desk. At no time did the researcher have any direct or indirect contact with the participants in order to ensure independence. The names of the 25 companies were not made available to the researcher, nor were their contact details.

Junior companies were requested to respond to 28 questions and had the option to remain anonymous. The questions were designed to allow for a wide spectrum of responses in order to probe:

- The typical size and capacity of the companies
- The strategic objectives and goals of the junior mining companies
- The perceived and experienced difficulties that these companies have
- The economic impact that these companies have in terms of direct job creation, procurement and social/community spend

A total of 17 responses were received over the two-month survey period, representing 68% of Junior Miners affiliated to the Minerals Council. In research terms this is an excellent response rate. 59% of individual respondents were at board level while the remaining 41% of respondents were at senior management level of their respective companies.

The findings of this survey are deemed representative of the clients of the Emerging Miners Desk and probably of the Junior Miner Sector at large in South Africa and can/should be further validated by expanding it to a broader sample group.

6.1 The Qualifications and Seniority of the Respondents

The control group of 25 Junior Miners allowed for well-informed responses to the survey from decision makers in the Junior Miner Sector, which is valuable and powerful for a study of this nature. The following table shows that the respondents to the survey are academically well qualified. Academic credentials included several Engineering-, Financial-, Administrative- and Management qualifications.

Table 26 Academic Qualifications of Respondents to Survey

Academic Qualification	Percentage of Respondents
Bachelor's Degree or Higher	47%
National Higher Diploma	41%
Grade 12 and other Training Certification	12%

Respondents also reported a wealth of experience in the mining industry, with 53% of respondents saying they have more than 15 years relevant experience in mining. It is estimated that the respondents to this survey represents a combined total mining industry experience in excess of 280 years between the 17 of them.

They also reported that 41% of the companies they represented have been around for longer than 20 years. None of the respondents represented companies existing less than 2 years. In fact, 94% of participating companies have been in business for longer than 5 years.

Table 27 The Age of Junior Mining Companies Participating in this Study

Age of Junior Mining Company	Percentage of Respondents
Less than 1 year	0%
Between 1 and 2 years	0%
Between 2 and 5 years	6%
Between 5 and 10 years	35%
Between 10 and 20 years	18%
More than 20 years	41%

Apart from their affiliation to the Minerals Council of South Africa, the participating companies are also affiliated to the following organisations and professional bodies:

- South African Institute of Mining and Metallurgy
- Institute of Quarrying of South Africa
- Australian Chamber of Commerce
- SA Diamond Producers Association
- Clay Brick Association of South Africa
- International Chrome Development Association
- ASPASA
- Mine Managers Association of South Africa

The individuals that responded to the survey are senior managers and executives at their organisations and therefore provided comprehensive insight for this survey which may possibly be extrapolated for the Junior Mining Sector in South Africa at large. This will have to be validated with a more comprehensive study. The following graph shows the spread of senior roles that the respondents hold in their companies.

The survey showed that a significant (41%) number of respondent companies are not yet in production and therefore not generating revenue from mining. This is significant and should be considered against the definitions of Junior Miners that in its current format uses revenue as a key consideration. This is also in contrast to Australian and Canadian Junior Miners which are also predominantly focussed on exploration and pre-production.

It can therefore be concluded that 41% of respondents fall into the “Prospector” and “Mine Developers” category of the Minerals Council Definition. 29% of participating Junior Mining Companies have a single operating mine, while 24% are bigger. The survey results are illustrated in the figure below.

6.2 Strategic Objectives of Junior Miners and where they see themselves

The Junior Miners who participated in this survey have different objectives and strategies. The survey however probed for commonalities with regards to where their focus lies and if there are any common themes. One of the common themes that was previously agreed upon at Junior Mining Indabas, was the realisation that Junior Mining Companies need to organise themselves, separate from the larger majors. The role of the Minerals Council is therefore recognized and pivotal in taking the Junior Mining Sector forward.

Junior Miners aspire to grow their businesses from early discovery of mineral deposits all the way to operating and producing mines. The following graph illustrates that only 12% of the respondents wanted to remain at exploration level, while more than 50% want to operate at least one mine. At heart many Juniors start as explorers and the survey highlights how 76% of still wish to remain active in exploration, while 36% of Junior Miners want to grow to the level of owning and operating multiple mines.

The survey further probed the matter of how Junior Mining Companies perceive their purpose. The responses were varied. Junior Miners feel they can and should make a significant contribution to:

- Creating Jobs (23%)
- Creating wealth for the entrepreneur – the owner (20%)
- To “Piloting” and spearheading new technology in mining (20%)
- Utilising resources that the majors would otherwise discard (18%)

The list of options in this part of the survey was not exhaustive, but the above four themes emerged as important.

When questioned about their focus markets, there was an overwhelming response that 68% of Junior Miners in the survey focus their energies on the local South African market, with only 2 respondents listing Asia and 2 respondents listing Australia as potential markets for their companies. From this, the researcher would like to highlight a kind of “loyalty” of Junior Miners have to their local market, something worth investigating further.

In answering the question as to what commodities are more attractive to them, the Junior Miners gave a wide response with Coal (37% of responses) marginally more attractive than Precious Metals (21% of responses) and Industrial Minerals (21%). The following figure illustrates the responses received on commodity attractiveness.

6.3 Challenges and Impediments to Junior Mining Companies

In order to understand the potential economic impact that Junior Miners can have, it becomes important to understand why they are not performing or progressing their projects as they want to.

The Johannesburg Junior Mining Indaba has highlighted the need to organise the sector as a key component to progress, but also noted the following areas:

- A lack of investment and difficulties in funding projects
- The regulatory environment in South Africa and the perceived inefficiencies
- Red tape and slow processing of licences
- A lack of support from major mining companies and government

These are a few of the key areas that have been highlighted in the market. This survey probed these areas further. Perhaps this research will assist in setting priorities for the Junior Sector going forward.

The survey requested that each respondent identify their top three challenges as experienced by their organisations in developing their projects and businesses. Again, the list of options provided the Juniors was not exhaustive but did again provide some clear themes. Respondents had to select from 15 options as well as adding some additional areas of difficulty. The options which they could select their top three concerns from can be grouped under four main headings:

- Regulatory Environment
- Funding
- Human Capital
- Strategic

Under these four headings the responses were as follows:

- 64% of responses highlighted the regulatory environment as an impediment to business
- 23% of responses highlighted a lack of or difficulty in obtaining funding as problematic
- Only 2% highlighted skills and human capital as problematic
- 4% of responses again highlighted strategic matters such as partnering and organising the sector as problems

Across the board, Junior Mining Companies find it difficult, if not impossible, to function in the same regulatory environment as the major and Blue-Chip mining houses. At a recent seminar on the implementation of the New Mining Charter (2018), the audience of a few hundred Junior Miners raised concerns about the “impracticality” of the implementation of the 2018 Mining Charter. There is a great willingness of the Juniors to support Government, but it was observed that these Junior Miners find themselves between a rock and a hard place – wanting to comply, yet completely overwhelmed by the complexity of doing so.

6.3.1 Regulatory Environment as the key impediment to Junior Miner success

The survey results show that apart from the general regulatory environment, Junior Miners highlighted the Mining Charter requirements as the second largest challenge. The concessions made by the Minister before finalising the Mining Charter are welcomed, yet the Junior Sector is asking for much more to be done for them in order to optimise their businesses.

The following figure provides an overview of the responses received from Junior Miner respondents.

In probing the Mining Charter further, all is not negative from the responses received by the Junior Miners. 21% of respondents reported that the Mining Charter has ensured transformation of the South African Mining Industry, while another 21% of respondents feel that only a select few individuals benefit from the Mining Charter. 7% of Junior Miner respondents agreed that the Mining Charter should be embraced in its current state.

On the negative side however, the responses showed that 28% of respondents feel that the Mining Charter historically and on balance could cause more damage than good to the industry. 17% of respondents feel that the Mining Charter is too ideological to implement sustainably.

The survey probed the various Mining Project Life Cycle areas to identify where Junior Miners have difficulty in progressing their projects. The greatest concern for respondents is obtaining a mining licence once they have completed their feasibility studies. The survey did not probe the reasons for this, and it may be that the Juniors are failing to provide the necessary documentation of the standard required for the authorities to issue the license. This is the area where 41% of respondents found it difficult to proceed.

It is also interesting to note that 88% of difficulties are experienced prior to the point where production can commence. Only 12% of respondents emphasised having difficulties after going into production. This may be because very few of the sample group have progressed to the production phase.

6.3.2 Junior Miner Funding to develop Economically Viable Mines

Junior Miners in South Africa have often highlighted the challenges they face in attracting funding for project development. The previous section highlighted the regulatory environment as a major impediment to attracting investment into the Junior Mining sector. The survey further probed the difficulties of attracting investors. The following figure illustrates what the Junior Miners perceive to be the reasons for non-investment.

The following survey question investigated Junior Miner needs to partner with someone to expedite their project development and operations. It is interesting that the response was a resounding majority – 71% of respondents - in favour of a funding partner that would exit the relationship at an arbitrary five years. Juniors showed a low appetite for partnering with “big brother” in government and Blue-Chip Mining Houses, and no appetite for non-mining partners. They showed some appetite to partner with private mining companies, with 18% of respondents willing to consider this.

The feedback on this particular question highlights the need for funding by a partner that will not dominate the Junior Miner.

South African commercial banks have steered clear of Junior Miners, sometimes bluntly refusing to engage Junior Miners. Junior Miners do not fit the banks’ risk profile and risk appetite. The survey engaged Junior Miners on these issues and the feedback confirmed that funding remains a major challenge. The survey did not go into the specifics of all potential funding models, but rather probed their preferences comparing private equity funding with capital market fund raising on stock markets.

Given the option of equity funding, Juniors largely responded negatively to this option as can be seen in the following graph. 59% of respondents prefer non-equity funding models, with 18% willing to sell 10% to an equity partner.

Junior Miners appear to be more open to raising capital through stock markets, which is also equity funding but perceived to be less threatening than private equity. Only 25% of respondents indicated that they would not consider stock markets as a vehicle to raise capital. It is interesting to note that the majority of South African Junior Miners prefer the local bourse in Johannesburg as the stock market of choice although there is very little success as compared to the Canadian, Australian and London stock markets. Herein lies an opportunity for the JSE.

Your next slide needs to be headed “Responses to question on raising funding via stock markets” for the sake of consistency

Equity for Historical Disadvantaged Individuals (“HDI”) in operating mines forms a fundamental area for successfully obtaining mining licences. The 2018 Mining Charter has removed the equity requirements for pre-operational (exploration) Junior Miners. The survey requested that respondents share the current state of their HDI shareholding. Only 12% of respondents reported zero percent HDI shareholding, with 59% of respondents indicating HDI shareholding of the requisite 26%, 12% between 27% and 49%, and 18% of respondents with HDI shareholding above 50%. It is therefore clear that although Junior Miners do not like relinquishing equity in their projects, they are willing to do so for transformation and to comply with the Mining Charter.

In conclusion the survey results confirm that funding of Junior Miner ventures remains an area of concern for the respondents. The feedback also indicates that Junior Miners prefer funding options where they do not have to relinquish significant percentages of equity. They also lean towards investors who will have little operational involvement. The funding needs and funding options remain an area for further investigation in order to bridge the gap that currently exists for South African Junior Miners.

6.3.3 Economic potential of the Junior Mining Sector

The survey showed that the 17 Junior Mining Company participants want to create jobs and wealth within the sector. The last set of questions prompted the Juniors to provide quantitative feedback on:

- Revenue
- Direct employment of permanent and contract workers
- Procurement Cost
- Labour Cost

6.3.3.1 Revenue

Respondents to the survey reported that in 35% of cases, they were not in a revenue generating position yet. 18% of Juniors reported annual revenues below R10 million, and another 18% reported annual revenues between R10 million and R50 million. This indicates that 71% of Junior Miners in the survey generate revenues less than R50 million.

24% of Juniors reported annual revenues between R50 million and R250 million. Only one respondent generates revenues above R250 million, and nobody is generating revenues above R500 million.

6.3.3.2 Direct Employment (Permanent and Fixed Contract Jobs)

Junior Miners responded positively with regards to their role to job creators. The survey investigated the Junior Miners’ role in creating jobs for permanent employment as well as fixed term contract employment. The survey also highlighted that Junior Mining Companies are not affected by organised labour or industrial action. Junior Miners do however see these issues within the current labour law framework as a deterrent to investors.

Junior Miners strike a balance between permanent employees and contractors and have some flexibility to manage their costs over the medium to long term. The following figure illustrates the respondents’ feedback on total jobs (permanent and contractors) created by their companies using the Junior Miner definition of the Minerals Council. 82% of respondents reported employing less than 150 people (combined permanent and contractors). In 8% of the responses Juniors employed between 150 and 250 people. Only 4% of respondents reported employing permanent and contract employees numbering between 250 and 500 individuals. In 6% of the responses the Junior Miners exceeded 500 jobs, and in that instance, these were predominantly fixed term contracts.

6.3.3.3 Procurement Expenditure by Junior Mining Companies

Junior Mining Companies in the survey provided feedback on their expenditure on procurement of goods and services on an annual basis. The figures provided are exclusive of capital goods and labour cost.

The following graph illustrates that 47% of Junior Mining Companies spend less than R5 million per annum on procurement, while 35% of respondents spend between R5 million and R50 million per annum.

Only three respondents to the survey reported procurement in excess of R50 million per annum, with one of them reporting expenditure in excess of R250 million per annum.

6.3.3.4 Permanent Labour Cost

The survey investigated both permanent labour and contract labour numbers. Contract labour cost was included in the procurement costs reported in the previous section. The 17 participants in the survey reported their permanent labour cost in the following graph, where it can be seen that 9 respondents have permanent labour costs below R2 million per annum while 8 respondents are on the opposite end of the scale with annual labour costs in excess of R10 million per annum. It can possibly be concluded that juniors try to avoid making permanent appointments prior to their projects going into production. Once they go into production, the appointments are made, and significant amounts of money are paid to the workforce.

7. CONCLUSIONS

The research study of the Junior Mining Sector was conducted on two levels:

- Part1 was a desktop study of all available information in the public domain
- Part 2 was a survey of the current clients of the Junior and Emerging Miners Desk at the Minerals Council, with 17 respondents from a client base of 25 companies and two associations.

In South Africa, the Department of Mineral Resources (“DMR”), does not differentiate or define sub-sectors within mining. The DMR does collect important information from prospecting and mining licence and permit holders on a monthly basis as determined by Section 28 of Act No. 28, 2002: MINERAL AND PETROLEUM RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT ACT, 2002. The data in their reporting to the public is however aggregated and not useful for identifying any sub-sector such as Junior Mining. If, source data from licence and permit holders could be accessed, it would assist in efforts to understand the licensing process better. The author will engage further with the DMR in this regard, but at the time of this research, the deputy director at the DMR department for Mineral Economics, Me.

Mpuleng Galane, was not at liberty to share this data. Existing DMR data can also be further analysed to better quantify mining licences per size of operator, per commodity and per geographic location.

The research highlighted that a common definition of the Junior Mining sector is required, and that the definition as proposed by the Minerals Council of South Africa is the most appropriate and should be considered as the standard going forward. A number of outdated definitions are still utilised by various institutions such as the DMR’s Small Scale Mining Directorate. These should be revised and brought in line with an accepted definition. Any definition should however be considered against an international backdrop where Junior Mining Companies are positioned differently (notably in Canada and Australia).

The research has highlighted that South African Junior Mining Companies are working towards a more advanced level of the mining value chain whereas the Canadian and Australian counterparts often remain at the discovery and exploration phases of the Mining Value Chain.

This can possibly be ascribed to the fact that Canadian and Australian Juniors have access to Venture Capital via their stock exchanges, which is not the case in South Africa. Canadian and Australian Junior Mining Companies also have the benefit of growing their companies’ value aggressively along the value curve as indicated in the graph below.

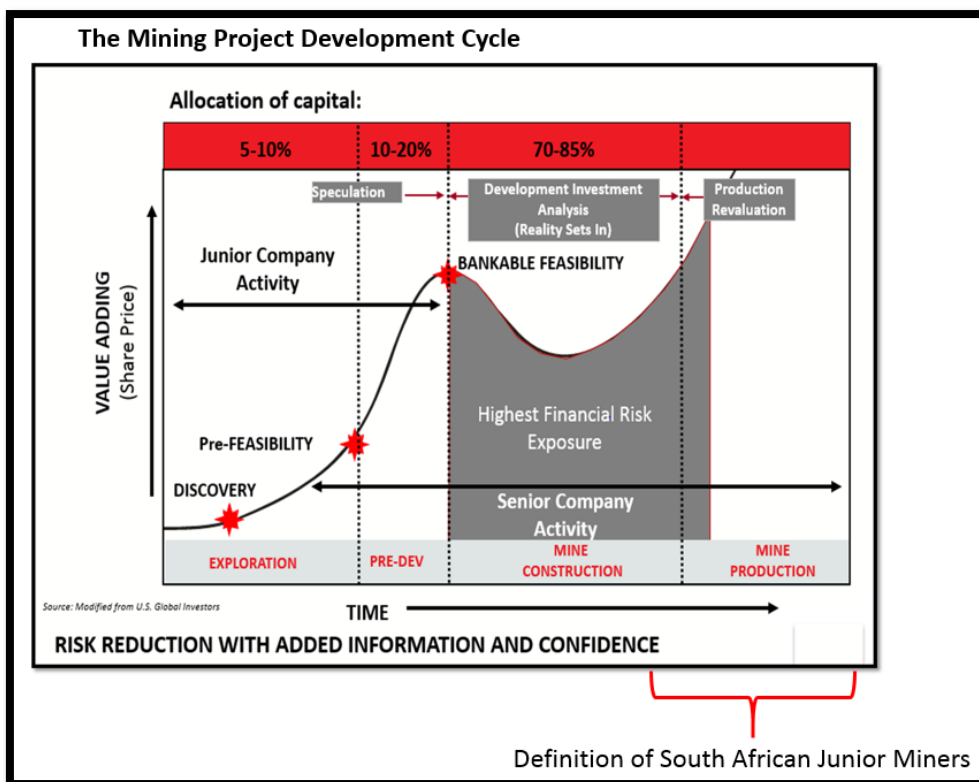

Figure 21 South African Juniors (as per definition) are positioned late on the value curve

Stock Market listings of Junior Mining Companies on the following graph show that the Johannesburg Stock Exchange is not competitive as a capital raising platform for South African Junior Miners. Of the 10 companies listed on the JSE and AltX, only five are trading actively. This is a key reason why South African Junior Mining Companies do not reach their economic potential – perhaps they never get started, due to a lack of funding.

In South African Junior Miners focus more on revenue making operations which is significantly different to their Canadian and Australian counterparts, who focus on exploration and pre-production project development to grow value along the value curve.

The research has shown that 80% (1493 licences) of mining licences in South Africa are in the hands of Junior Mining companies and only 20% (361 licences) in the hands of Majors. In contrast Junior Mining Companies generated R54 billion (8% of revenue) in revenues against R608 billion (92% of revenue) of the larger miners in 2018.

Number of Junior Mining Companies

Although the research does not have a definitive number for the number of Junior Mining Companies in South Africa, this research makes the following estimation:

- Major Mining Companies hold an estimated 361 mining licences in 88 companies
- Junior Miners hold an estimated 685 mining licences in 414 companies/entities
- Small-Scale Miners hold an estimated 467 mining licences in 463 companies/entities
- Micro Miners hold an estimated 341 mining licences in in 341 companies/entities

Economic Impact of Junior Mining Companies on the overall Mining Sector

The Junior Miner sector includes Micro-, Small-Scale- and Junior Miners. The economic impact that these companies has within the mining sector according to STATS SA is as follows:

Capital Expenditure per annum: R2.751 billion (4.1% of total mining industry)

Revenue: R54.93 billion (7.8% of total mining industry)

Expenditure: R55.86 billion (8.4% of total mining industry)

Number of People employed within the Junior Mining Sector

The definition of Junior Miner states that these companies employ fewer than 500 people. The findings of this research, although not definitive, support the definition as proposed by the Minerals Council.

Evaluating the statistics provided by the DMR, MQA and STATS SA estimates that between 33,500 and 40,300 people are employed in the Junior Mining Sector, which is around 7.5% - 9% of the current mining workforce. Considering the multiplier effect of between 7 and 10 times for job creation to surrounding industries, the Junior Mining Sector creates between 230,000 jobs on the conservative estimate side and 800,000 jobs on the upper end of estimates for the South African economy.

Economic Impact on broader South African Economy

Applying a job multiplier of 7 for each job in mining as proposed in the 2014 Australian research report²⁰, implies that the Junior Miner sector can create between 234,000 and 280,000 jobs in other industries.

The following financial numbers provided by STATS SA provides an idea of the economic impact of the sector on the broader economy.

Revenue per annum R 54.4 billion

- Turnover R 48.7 billion
- Interest R 0.5 billion
- Dividends R 1.6 billion
- Rental/lease R 0.1 billion
- Plant/lease R 1.2 billion
- Profit on assets R 0.8 billion
- Other income R 1.6 billion

Expenses per annum R 55.5 billion

- Procurement R 21.1 billion
- Employees R 10.6 billion
- Interest paid R 1.1 billion
- Royalties and patents R 1.0 billion
- Hiring equipment R 1.1 billion
- Depreciation R 2.9 billion
- Loss on assets R 5.4 billion
- Other expenses R 11.3 billion

The survey of Junior Mining companies affiliated to MCSA provided the following key responses:

Junior Miners see their greatest purpose as:

- Job Creation
- Wealth Creation for entrepreneurs who take risks
- To spearhead the introduction of new technology in mining

- To utilise mineral resources that are too small for major mining houses' overhead structures

53% of Juniors aspire to operate at least one mine.

68% of Juniors responded by saying they are focussed to supply their products back into the South African economy.

With regards to commodity attractiveness; respondents indicated that Coal, Precious Metals and Industrial Minerals are most attractive for success as Junior Miners.

The survey highlighted the following factors as impediments to Junior Miners developing their projects successfully:

- 64% of respondents cited the regulatory environment in South Africa as not being conducive for success
- 23% of respondents cited a lack of funding as a major impediment.

Junior Miners indicated that obtaining a mining licence was the single biggest obstacle to progress. It is also the most time-consuming aspect. It is unclear if the delay is caused by Junior Miners' inability to comply with DMR requirements or if the delays are due to inefficiencies at the DMR.

Junior Miners responded that they prefer non-interfering business partners. 71% of respondents want funding partners who exit after a fixed period. 59% of respondents indicated that they do not want to sell an equity stake in their project as a funding option.

From the 17 participants in the survey, 47% were small companies with revenues below R5 million per annum, and salary bills below R1 million per annum.

The researcher

Mr. Hermanus Jacobus Kriel graduated as a mining engineer from the University of Pretoria in 1994, with an Anglo Gold scholarship. In 1995 Gencor headhunted him to join their Samancor operations where he progressed to the level of Production Manager. In 1998 Samancor entered into a joint venture agreement with the German company Quarzwerke GmbH. Mr. Kriel moved to Germany for more than a year where he received training in project management to ultimately commission a new processing plant for the joint venture partners in Delmas South Africa in 2000. After successful commissioning of the plant Mr. Kriel broadened his horizons and joined Trans Hex in the Richtersveld where he headed their exploration efforts at Reuning for a year. He was then transferred to Trans Hex's flagship operation at Baken Mine where he advanced to the level of Regional Manager of the Lower Orange River Operations, which included three mining towns, four mining operations and seven processing plants. During this period Mr. Kriel completed a Master of Business Leadership degree at the University of South Africa through distance learning.

By 2006 Mr. Kriel had achieved all that the goals he set for his operational production career, and he decided to move to Johannesburg where he started a consulting career with Ukwazi Mining Solutions. In 2008 he founded VBKOM (Pty) Ltd, a consultancy providing technical and economical services. He is currently the group CEO of VBKOM Holdings (Pty) Ltd. In 2017 Mr. Kriel enrolled as a PhD student at the University of Pretoria, where he researches the Junior Mining Sector on a part time basis.

Mr. Kriel holds a Mine Managers Certificate since June 1996. He is a fellow of both SAIMM and IQSA. Mr. Kriel is a registered Professional Engineer with ECSA – Pr. Eng 20080140. Mr. Kriel is a Competent Person in terms of SAMREC and JORC Reserve Signoffs and a Qualified Person to sign off Reserves on the Canadian NI43-101 code, all which he has done regularly during the past 12 years as a consultant.
